LITTLE GIRL HAD CHRONIC COUGH

Left from Whooping Cough—
Was Terribly Runtown and Weak—Mother Tells How
She Was Cured by Vinol.
Philadelphia, Pa.—My little girl aged thirteen years had the whooping cough which made her so weak and run down. She had to stay at home from school while being treated by the doctor, and nothing seemed to help her. I saw Vinol advertised and decided to try it. I soon noticed an improvement, and after giving her four bottles her cough was gone, her strength had returned and she was a good appetite. We think there is nothing like Vinol.

What Vinol did for this little girl it will do for others, for it is the healing, curative, tissue building medicine of the medicinal elements of the extract of cod liver oil, which is the most powerful and most effective of all the medicinal elements of the extract of cod liver oil.

Remember, if Vinol fails to benefit, we return your money.

And thus the lawyer found them when he returned from closing the gate behind Flanagan.

"I cannot say anything. I cannot do anything till I have had a few words with Mrs. Scoville. How soon do you think I can speak to her?"

"Not very soon. Her daughter says she is quite worn out. Would it not be better to give her a rest for tonight, Judge?"

The Judge, now quite recovered, but strangely shrunk and wan, showed no surprise at this request, odd as it was, on the lips of this honest but somewhat crabbed lawyer, but answered out of the fullness of his own heart and from the depths of his preoccupation: "My necessity is greater than her. The change I saw in her is irreparable. One moment she was all fire and determination, and the next she was a mere shadow, and I am left with the next—but you were with us. You witnessed her hesitation—felt its force and what its effect was upon the damnable scamp who has our honor—the honor of the Ostrander under his tongue. Something must have produced this change. What? good friend, what?"

"I don't know any more than you do, Judge. But I think you are mistaken about the previous nature of her feelings. I noticed that she was not at peace with herself when she came into the room."

"What's that?" The tone was short, and for the first time irritable. "The change, if there was a change, was not so sudden as you think. She looked troubled, and I thought, in response when she came into the room."

"You don't know her? You don't know what passed between us. She was all right then, but—no to her. Black. She must have recovered by this time. Ask her to come here for a minute. I won't detain her. I will wait for her warning knock right here."

The Judge had declared his readiness to be greater than hers, and after Mr. Black had subjected him to one of his most searching looks he decided that this was so, and quietly departed upon his errand. The Judge left alone, sitting in his great chair, with no light in heart or mind to combat the shadows of approaching night, and heavier and heavier upon the room and upon himself with every slow passing and intolerable minute.

At last, when the final ray had departed and darkness reigned supreme, there came a low knock on the door. Then a troubled cry:

"Oh, Judge, are you here?" "Don't come any nearer; it is not necessary." A pause, then the quick question ringing hollow from the darkness: "Why have you doubt returned? Why are you no longer the woman you were when not an hour ago and in this very spot you cried, 'I will be Oliver's advocate!'"

"Then, as no answer came—as minutes passed, and still no answer came, he spoke again and added: 'I know that you are ill and exhausted—broken between duty and sympathy; but you must answer me, Mrs. Scoville. My affairs won't wait. I must know the truth and all the truth before this day is over.'"

"You shall!" Her voice sounded hollow, too, and, oh, how weary! "You allowed the document you showed me to remain a little too long before eyes. That last page—need I say 'Say it.'"

"Shows—shows change, Judge. Some words have been erased and new ones written in are not many, but—"

"I understand. I do not like Debarah." The words came pause and very softly, almost as her own, but which had sounded its low knock of doom through the darkness. "Too many stumbling-blocks in your way, Deborah, too much to combat. The most trusting heart must give way under such a strain. That page was tampered with. I tampered with it myself. I am not expert at forgery. I had better have left it, as he wrote it." Then after another silence, he added, with a certain vehemence: "We will struggle no longer, either you or I. The boy must come home. Prepare Reuther, or, if you think best, provide a place for her where she will be safe from the storm which bids fair to wreck us here. No, don't speak just ask Mr. Black to return, will you?"

When Mr. Black re-entered the study, it was to find the room lighted and the Judge bent over the table, writing.

"You are going to send for Oliver?" he queried.

The Judge hesitated, then mellowing black to sit, said abruptly: "What is Andrews' attitude in this matter?"

Andrews was Shelby's district attorney.

Black's answer was plain. "I saw him for one minute an hour ago. I think, as present, he is inclined to be both deaf and dumb, but if he's driven to action, he will act. And, Judge, the man Flanagan isn't going to stop where he is."

"Black, be merciful to my misery. What does this man know? Have you any idea?"

"No, Judge, I haven't. He's as light as a drum—and as noisy. It is possible—just possible that he's an empty. A few days will tell."

"I cannot wait for a few days. I hardly feel as if I could wait a few hours. Oliver must come, even if it is the consequences are likely to be fatal."

An Ostrander once accused cannot be silent. Oliver has been accused and—

"Send that!" he quickly cried, pulling forward the telegram he had written. Mr. Black took up the telegram and read:

Come at once, imperative. No delay and no excuses. ARCHIBALD OSTRANDER.

"Mrs. Scoville will supply the address," continued the poor father. "You will see that it goes, and that its sending is kept secret. The answer, if any is sent, had better be directed to your office. What do you say, Black?"

"I am your friend, right straight through, Judge. Your friend."

"And my boy's adviser?"

"I'm a surly fellow, Judge. I have known you all these years, yet I've never expressed—never said what I even find it hard to say now, that—that my esteem in something more than esteem, that—that I'll do anything for you, Judge."

"I won't talk of that, Black. Tell Mrs. Scoville to keep me informed—and bring me any message that may come. The boy, even if he leaves the first thing in the morning, cannot get here before tomorrow night."

"Not possible."

"He will telegraph. I shall hear from him. O God! the hours I must wait! my boy! my boy!"

It was nature's irrepressible cry. Black pressed his hand and went out with the telegram.

CHAPTER XV.

He Must Be Found.

Next morning an agitated confab took place at the gate, or rather between the two front gates. Mr. Black rang for admittance, and Mrs. Scoville answered the call.

"One moment, Mrs. Scoville. How can I tell the Judge? Young Ostrander is gone—fled the city, and I can get no clue to his whereabouts. I have been burning the telephone wires ever since the first dispatch, and this is the result. Where is Reuther?"

"At Miss Weeks. I had to command her to leave me alone with the Judge. It's the first time I ever spoke unkindly to her. Have you the messages with you?"

He handed them into her hand. "I will hand them in to him. We can do nothing less and nothing more. Then if he wants you, I will telegraph."

"Mrs. Scoville—" she felt his hand laid softly on her shoulder—"there is some one else in this matter to consider besides Judge Ostrander."

"Reuther? Oh, don't I know it! She's not out of my mind a moment."

"Reuther is young, and has a gallant soul. I mean you, Mrs. Scoville, you are not to succumb to this trial. You have a future—a bright future—should have. Do not endanger it by giving up all your strength now. It's precious, that strength, or would

SAN DIEGO FORMALLY OPENS HER IMPOSING EXPOSITION

President Wilson Touches Button Which Starts Year-Long Celebration Going.

By Associated Press.

SAN DIEGO, Cal., Jan. 1.—Three thousand miles away, President Wilson arose today in the small hours at Washington and touched an electric button that opened to the world at midnight here the Panama-California Exposition. It will remain open until January 1, 1915.

William G. McAuliffe, Secretary of the Treasury, represented President Wilson at the opening celebration.

As the personal representative of King Alfonso of Spain there was present Count del Valle de Salazar, and with him were the legates of other foreign powers.

Fireworks and illuminations signified the opening of the gates early yesterday evening and for three hours there was opportunity to explore the new city of Old Spain, which has risen on the mesa above the harbor of the San.

At 11:36 P. M. the formal ceremony of throwing wide the gates to the world began. Egan J. Gage of San Diego, former Secretary of the Treasury, introduced Colonel D. C. Collier, former president of the exposition.

After describing the inception of the exposition, Colonel Collier made way for President C. Aubrey Davidson, to whom were delivered the plans, the keys, and finally the exposition itself.

At midnight the exercises ended and the flash of an electric spark in the White House carried over the wires President Wilson's announcement.

Decorative ceremonies were planned to be held during the exposition grounds this morning. In behalf of President Wilson, Secretary McAuliffe was on the program to deliver an address. Other speeches were to be by John Barrett, director-general of the Pan-American Union, in behalf of the nations of the two Americas; by Count de Salazar, in behalf of King Alfonso of Spain; by the representatives of other foreign powers; and by the governors of California and other western states.

Women's Winter Outer Dress

Fresh, Fashionable, Deeply Cut in Price

This clothing is of a higher order than comes to any other store here. At no time, do we deal in the cheaply made, carelessly fashioned apparel made to attract and with no thought to the service it should give. Our collections are intelligently chosen, splendidly varied and warranted to give satisfactory wear. The styles are correct, the size-range ample and the choice is biggest in town. The season's lowest prices now rule, to effect a rigid clearance before a new season's apparel begins to arrive.

Every Suit In Stock Half Its Earlier Price

—Special!—1.25 and 1.50 percale and ging-ham house dresses, sizes 34 to 47, 98c each.

Begins Saturday, January 2nd

Earlier than ever before, the sale holds more opportunities than previously. This by reason of enlarged stocks, greater assortments and lower prices than we generally put on goods for quick clearance. The year was particularly advantageous for right buying, and we let slip an opportunity when the goods measured up to our standard of quality. It's the remainders of these specially bought things that have been deeply cut—the staple merchandise and the fashionables. Nothing in the sale is old or useless and much is not four weeks in stock. At clearance time it all goes and with little regard for price; a store like this, to keep fresh and clean, must take certain losses which are gainful to its patrons. You'll do best here, where the best is to be found and we hope you'll fare well, which you may, if alert to the yearly money-saving chance.
